LawnStarter

Re: Senior Lifecycle Marketing Manager

Dear Hiring Team,

I am excited to apply for the Senior Lifecycle Marketing Manager role at LawnStarter because the way you describe the job aligns closely with how I work: no agency, no contractor pool, you write the message, build it, send it, and analyze the results yourself. That has been my daily reality at Solenzo, the company I founded and have led for the past two and a half years.

I have architected a comprehensive lifecycle automation system, over 20 workflows spanning lead capture, qualification, triggered booking with confirmations and reminders, no-show recovery, onboarding nurture, and long-term reactivation, and I built every piece of it myself: the agent logic, the copy, and the monitoring that detects and resolves issues before a customer even notices.

I break down manual marketing workflows into agent-driven architectures that score a business's digital footprint and generate personalized outreach at a level of detail impossible to achieve by hand, the same challenge you describe as the reason this role exists.

While I have not used Braze specifically, the discipline (segmentation, triggered logic, personalization, and the judgment to know what truly deserves automation) is the same skill regardless of platform. I quickly master new tools because every client relationship begins with learning their existing stack.

I would welcome the opportunity to discuss in detail what I have built and the impact it had. Thank you for considering my application.

Sincerely,

Joshua Rotenberg
