Re: Local SEO Specialist

Dear Hiring Team,

Google Business Profile and local-listings work is where my SEO career started, and it's still the foundation of what I do. At Solenzo, claiming and optimizing a client's GBP is the first deliverable in every engagement, before anything else on the account starts. That instinct goes back to Birdeye, where selling and onboarding partners onto our data-aggregator/listings-syndication solution was the backbone of the channel offer, ensuring every partner's end customer had a properly configured local presence.

Beyond that core, I bring technical SEO depth (Screaming Frog audits, schema and structured data, Ahrefs, Semrush) and 15+ years owning client relationships end to end: reporting, retention, and finding the next growth opportunity in an account. What I don't have is experience at the specific scale of a multi-location enterprise brand, my listings and GBP work has been for individual local service businesses and Birdeye's partner network, not a single large chain, and that's worth being upfront about.

I'd welcome the chance to talk through how that background fits what you're building for your law firm clients.

Sincerely,

Joshua Aaron Rotenberg
